5. Risks

5.1 General Risks

Investors should consider and satisfy themselves as to the risks of investing in the Funds. Investment in the Funds are meant to produce returns over the long-term. It may not be possible to obtain short-term gains from such investments.

Investors should be aware that the price of units in the Funds, and the income from them, if any, may fall or rise and investors may not get back their original investment. No guarantee is given, expressed or implied, that investors will receive back any amount invested.

All investments involve risks and there can be no guarantee against loss resulting from an investment in any units, nor can there be any assurance that the Fund's investment objective will be attained in respect of its overall performance. Investors should therefore ensure (prior to any investment being made) that they are satisfied with the risk profile of the overall objective disclosed.

5.2 Specific Risks

Investors should carefully consider the following:

5.2.1 Forenexchange /Qurrencyrisk

As some of the Funds which are Singapore Dollar denominated will invest in underlying entities which are denominated in foreign currencies (e.g. US Dollars and Euro), fluctuations in the exchange rates between the Singapore Dollar and these foreign currencies may have an impact on the income and value of such Funds.

The Funds may invest their assets in securities denominated in a wide range of currencies, some of which may not be freely convertible. The net asset value of the Depository Property of each Fund as expressed in its base currency will fluctuate in accordance to the changes in the foreign exchange rate between its base currency and the currencies in which the relevant Funds' investments are denominated. The Funds may therefore be exposed to a foreign exchange / currency risk.

Generally, the Manager does not hedge the foreign currency exposure (if any) of PRULink Asian Equity Fund, PRULink Singapore Cash Fund and PRULink Asian Singapore Managed Fund although they may have the discretion to do so. For the PRULink Global Bond Fund, the Manager adopts an active currency management strategy and may hedge the foreign currency exposure(s) depending on the Manager's views on the currency (cies).

5.2.2 Derivatives risk

The Funds may invest in derivatives which will be subject to risks. While the judicious use of derivatives by the Manager can be beneficial, derivatives involve risks different from, and, in some cases, greater than, the risks presented by more traditional securities investments. Some of the risks associated with derivatives are market risk, management risk, credit risk, liquidity risk, operational risk and leverage risk.

Investments in derivatives may require the deposit of initial margin and additional margin on short notice if the market moves against the investment positions. If no provision is made for the required margin within the prescribed time, the investment may be liquidated at a loss. Therefore, it is essential that such investments in derivatives are monitored closely. The Manager has the necessary controls for investments in derivatives and systems in place to monitor the derivative positions for the Funds.

The Manager does not intend to use derivative transactions for speculation or leverage but may use them for efficient portfolio management and/or risk management.

5.2.3 Interest rate and credit risk

Investments in fixed income portfolios will be subject to the usual risks of investing in bonds and other fixed income securities. Bonds and other fixed income securities are subject to interest rate fluctuations and credit risks, such as risk of default by issuers.

Investments in fixed income securities are subject to adverse changes in the financial condition of the issuer, or in general economic conditions, or both, or an unanticipated rise in interest rates, which may impair the ability of the issuer to make payments of interest and the principal, especially if the issuer is highly leveraged. Such issuer's ability to meet its debt obligations may also be adversely affected by specific projected business forecasts, or the unavailability of additional financing. Also, an economic downturn or an increase in interest rates may increase the potential for default by the issuers of these securities.

5.2.4 Political and/ or regulatory risk

The value of the Deposited Property may be affected by uncertainties such as international political developments, changes in government policies, changes in taxation, restrictions on foreign investment and currency repatriation, currency fluctuations and other developments in the laws and regulations of countries in which an investment may be made. Furthermore, the legal infrastructure and accounting, auditing and reporting standards in certain countries in which an investment may be made may not provide the same degree of investor protection or information to investors as would generally apply in major securities markets. Foreign ownership restrictions in some markets may mean that corporate action entitlements in relation to any collective investment schemes or other investments the Funds are invested into may not always be secured or may be restricted.

5.2.5 Emerging markets risk

The Funds may be investing in investments in emerging markets which may be subject to higher political risks, regulatory risks and liquidity risks than investments in developed markets. Due to many emerging markets undergoing rapid growth, there is less regulation and there may be less public information about companies listed on such markets as compared to other stock markets. Investors would have to take into consideration that trading volume in emerging markets may be substantially less than in the world's leading stock markets and may have to be conducted at unfavourable prices. Investments in emerging markets are also subject to repatriation risks. Many emerging markets have restricted foreign investment policies although liberalisation continues. Emerging markets may not have fully developed custodian and settlement services and therefore investments in such markets are subject to a greater degree of risk.

5.2.6 Sector risk

The Funds may also be investing in "sector-based" funds. As the policy of the Manager is to take a more concentrated approach in order to take a greater advantage of successful investments, there is a greater than usual risk. As the investment potential is long-term, prices may be subject to above-average volatility. Investors should be aware that there can be no assurance that the Funds' investments will be successful or that the investment objective of the Funds will be attained.

5.2.7 Portfolio and market risk

Each Fund is intended for investors who can accept the risks associated with investing primarily in the securities of the type held in that Fund. Investors in equities will be subject to the risks associated with equity and equity-related securities, including fluctuations in market prices, adverse issuer or market information and the fact that equity and equity-related interests are subordinate in the right of payment to other corporate securities, including debt securities. Likewise, investors in fixed income securities will be subject to the risks associated with debt securities including credit and interest rate risk, and the additional risks associated with high-yield debt securities, loan participations and derivative securities. In addition, investors should be aware of the risks associated with the active management techniques that are expected to be employed by certain Funds. An investment in a Fund does not constitute a complete investment program. Investors may wish to complement an investment in a Fund with other types of investments.

5.2.8 Small companies risk

Investment in securities of smaller companies can involve greater risk than that normally associated with larger, more established companies. In particular, smaller companies have limited product lines, markets or financial resources and may be dependent for their management on a limited number of key individuals. Securities of smaller companies may also be less liquid than the securities of larger companies, as a result of inadequate trading volume or restrictions on trading.

5.2.9 Counterparty and settlement considerations

The Funds will be exposed to credit risk on the counterparties with which it trades particularly in relation to options, swaps, futures, contracts and other financial derivative instruments (“FDIs”) that are not traded on a Recognised Market. Such FDIs are not afforded the same protections as may apply to participants trading futures or options on organised exchanges, such as the performance guarantee of an exchange clearing house. The Funds will be subject to the possibility of the insolvency, bankruptcy or default of a counterparty with which the Funds trades, which could result in substantial losses to the Funds.

The Funds will also be exposed to a credit risk on parties with whom it trades securities, and may also bear the risk of settlement default, in particular in relation to debt securities such as bonds, notes and similar debt obligations or instruments. Investors should also note that settlement mechanisms in emerging markets are generally less developed and reliable than those in more developed countries and that this therefore increases the risk of settlement default, which could result in substantial losses for the Funds in respect of investments in emerging markets. Investors should also note that the securities of small capitalisation companies as well as the securities of companies domiciled in emerging markets are less liquid and more volatile than more developed stock markets and this may result in fluctuations in the price of the units.

5.2.10 Liquidity risk

Funds could face liquidity risk arising from investments in securities that have low trading volumes, imposed trading restrictions or temporary suspensions from trading. Investments in securities that have high liquidity risk may reduce return or incur substantial losses to the Funds if the Funds are unable to sell these securities at opportune times or prices. Liquidity could dry up in a very short time especially during a crisis.

5.2.11 Money Market Fund (MMF) risk

The purchase of a unit in the MMF is not the same as placing funds on deposit with a bank or deposit-taking financial institution. Although the Manager may seek to maintain or preserve the value of the principal of the MMF, there can be no assurance that the ILP Sub-Fund shall be able to meet this objective. The MMF is not a guaranteed fund, in that there is no guarantee as to the amount of capital invested or return received.

The above should not be considered to be an exhaustive list of the risks which potential policyholders should consider before investing into any Fund(s). Investors should be aware that an investment in the particular Fund(s) may be exposed to other risks of an exceptional nature from time to time.

The Fund may also invest in depository receipts including American Depository Receipts (“ADRs”) and Global Depository Receipts (“GDRs”), debt securities convertible into common shares, preference shares and warrants.

III. Investment Approach

The first part of the process is idea generation, whereby the Investment Manager uses proprietary screens and industry knowledge across a wide investment universe to identify investment candidates with attractive characteristics. The next stage is the fundamental analysis of these candidate stocks. This fundamental analysis drives the Investment Manager’s investment approach, and the Investment Manager employs a strong discipline around modeling stocks within its valuation framework, which allows for bull, bear and base case scenario analysis. The Investment Manager insists on challenge and debate to test the assumptions and help to achieve a level of conviction in each security. The next stage is portfolio construction. In taking active risk, the Investment Manager considers the stock-by-stock relationships and the relative country and sector exposures in the Fund to ensure sufficient diversification. The Investment Manager establishes an explicit link between risk and return, which reinforces the Investment Manager’s ability to take long-term positions without being forced to close positions in response to volatility. The last stage is review and control. This is a team-owned responsibility involving a formal peer review of all strategies to ensure the integrity of the Investment Manager’s process.

IV. Product Suitability

The Fund is only suitable for investors who:

- seek long term-total return;
- are comfortable with risks of an equity fund that invests in the Asia Pacific ex-Japan region; and

II. Investment Objective and Focus

The PRULink Global Bond Fund aims to maximise total return through investment in a diversified portfolio of debt securities denominated in any currency. While the Manager has power to hedge currency risk, the Fund will seek to invest primarily in securities so as to give exposure to major developed market currencies.

III. Investment Approach and Process

Investment Approach

The Manager's Fixed Income team's investment approach is based on the following beliefs:

- Investment style based on fundamental, valuation and technical analyses
- Medium-term investment horizon
- Investment opportunities are created by identifying cyclical extremities in interest rates and credit spreads
- Value opportunities arise due to shifts in investor risk perception, resulting in the mispricing of assets relative to fundamentals

Investment Process

A four-stage fixed income investment process is employed, which combines both top-down and bottom-up investment analyses to identify value opportunities:

1. Investment Outlook & Fair Value Analysis

Macroeconomic and market research is undertaken to determine the investment outlook and ascertain the fair value of the interest rate, credit and currency markets.

2. Strategy Formulation

Drawing on the top-down views established in the first step of the process, further analyses of the interest rate, credit and currency markets are conducted for the formulation of our investment strategies. The team aims to provide value-added returns from three main sources: First, Bond Market Allocation & Duration Strategy; Second, Credit Strategy; Third, Currency Strategy.

Bond Market Allocation & Duration Strategy

This stage of investment process aims to identify relative value opportunities within the relevant bond markets by comparing the current bond market pricing with fair value pricing on a forward basis. It takes into considerations the forward yield curve pricing vis-à-vis the team's yield projections, nominal yield levels relative to historical experience, and steepness of yield curves. Detailed analysis is also undertaken to understand the structural, cyclical as well as technical factors that cause mispricing of the interest rate markets.

Credit Strategy

There are two key parts in managing credits: First, based on the established top-down credit market and sector outlook, credit sector allocation recommendations are formulated. Second, a bottom-up credit analysis is conducted. This involves both quantitative and qualitative analyses to assess credit strength and default risk over time. In addition to an assessment of an issuer's credit quality, a relative value analysis is conducted by comparing the yield or credit spreads of the bond issue across relevant peers and/ or across credit sectors.

Currency Strategy

The approach involves the broad assessment of the currencies' fundamentals and valuations, including the exchange rate and monetary policy, real effective exchange rate and interest rate carry. The Manager then combines this analysis with a range of technical inputs, allowing the team to identify 'outliers' and trends in currency movement. An active position in currencies will be taken where valuations identify 'outliers', fundamentals point to potential appreciation and changes in price momentum are evident.

3. Portfolio Construction

The team takes into consideration the quantitative and fundamental work done in the earlier steps to construct a portfolio in line with the duration/yield curve, sector, credit and currency risk preferences of the team, as well as the fund's investment objectives.

4. Risk Control and Review

Risk control parameters are established at the inception of the portfolio and portfolios under management are reviewed regularly, keeping in mind the overall risk characteristics with respect to duration, curve neutrality and credit concentration.

IV. Product Suitability

The Fund is only suitable for investors who:

- seek long term total return;
- are comfortable with the risks of a fund that invests in global debt securities which are denominated in any currency; and
- appreciate that their capital may be at risk and that the value of their investment and any derived income may fall as well as rise.

II. Investment Objective and Focus

The PRULink Singapore Cash Fund aims to preserve principal value and maintain a high degree of liquidity while seeking to provide returns which are higher than those offered by Singapore dollar short term bank deposits by investing primarily in high quality short-term money market instruments and debt securities. Such investments may include Singapore fixed interest deposits, short-term government and corporate bonds, commercial bills and deposits with financial institutions and similar assets.

III. Investment Approach

One of the key sources of value-add for the PRULink Singapore Cash Fund is derived from the meaningful yield pick-up generated from the Manager's Fixed Income Team's credit selection process. The investment decisions are generally based on detailed credit research and relative value analysis.

The team's credit analysis entails:

- Sector and corporate level credit analysis & recommendations
- Generation of internal credit ratings that will guide portfolio investment decisions
- Identification of high default risk candidates for avoidance by portfolio managers
- Relative value analysis as inputs into the credit selection process.

The Fund also seeks to add value through moderate duration management. Duration levels are extended or shortened based on the Manager's interest rate view vis-à-vis what has been priced into the short end of the yield curve.

The Manager seeks to maintain an optimal balance between meeting redemption demands and maximising returns. Adequate liquidity is ensured through investing in short-dated papers and deposits, while terming out investments in deposits and bonds to capture incremental yield.

IV. Product Suitability

The Fund is only suitable for investors who:

- seek liquidity for their investments and returns comparable to Singapore dollar short term bank deposits;

The Fund has a strategic asset allocation mix of 70% equities and 30% in fixed income.

III. Investment Approach

The Fund is managed by Eastspring's multi asset allocation team. The Fund Manager employs the following investment philosophy:

- Markets are complex, dynamic systems with different factors driving asset classes. These factors and their correlations are constantly changing along with the nature of the global economic regime. Given this, the Fund Manager employs a disciplined, systematic but dynamic investment process to overcome behavioural biases.
- This process is a "Balance of Indicators" approach, using data driven signals with qualitative inputs, applied pragmatically across different strategies, recognizing that no single indicator works consistently over the longer term.

The Fund Manager will actively manage the asset exposures to best position the portfolio utilising inputs from their proprietary Balance of Indicators approach. The Balance of Indicators has been developed and refined over the years within Eastspring and involves the screening of over 2,000 indicators. Although the Fund Manager utilise third party data sources, the process by which the Fund Manager analyse this data has been devised internally by the team. Moreover, whilst the Fund Manager recognise the importance of this quantitative element of our process, it serves as a starting point for their decision-making on asset allocation.

The Balance of Indicators is based on the inputs from valuation, technical and fundamental factors – giving a final composite score for each asset class pair used within the Fund, based on those factors that have provided the highest risk-adjusted returns from the library of indicators.

The Fund Manager will then use the Balance of Indicators model to assess each individual investment decision at the asset allocation level. The Fund Manager will evaluate such opportunities in the context of the Balance of Indicators approach to determine if a position is warranted.

The Fund Manager will also take into consideration qualitative inputs including views from other experienced members of the team. A team assessment is made whether such qualitative factors are currently driving a particular asset class's performance such as to mandate an adjustment to the Balance of Indicators composite score.

The Fund Manager will allocate across the Fund's eligible assets using the final Balance of Indicators composite scores for the relevant asset classes in the portfolio. Maximum and minimum tilts in portfolio allocations are sized relative to risk and return objectives of the portfolio. Position sizes are adjusted for their volatility and potential impact on the portfolio. More volatile positions will typically have smaller position sizes to minimize their negative impact during drawdown periods.

IV. Product Suitability

The Fund is only suitable for investors who:

- seek total return in the medium to long term;
- are comfortable with risks of a fund that primarily invests in Singapore and Asia excluding Japan; and
- appreciate that their capital will be at risk and that the value of their investment and any derived income may fall as well as rise.
